Draft Drop Seen Quick Result Of 1 June Service Pay Boost

Military pay increases 1 June costing $576,438,000 may result in a quick slash in draft calls.

Such a forecast was made to THE JOURNAL this week by Assistant Secretary of Defense William H. Francis, Jr., the Pentagon's top manpower authority.

As the Armed Forces waited for President Eisenhower to sign the measure into law following routine administrative review action, finance officers in all the Services were set to flash instructions to the field on implementation of the new pay scales.

Last week's issue of THE JOURNAL gave pertinent details on the final bill sent to the White House.

Hailing the action of Congress and the "outstanding work" of the House and Senate Armed Services Subcommittees under Representative Paul Kilday (D-Tex) and Senator John Stennis (D-Miss), Mr. Francis said he foresees "an immediate rise in retention rates among skilled military manpower."

Questioned as to whether the pay adjustment will affect draft calls, Mr. Francis noted that the Army was able to cut the July call from 11,000 to 10,000. He said it is "quite possible that future calls

New Pay Tables; A $50 Million?

THE JOURNAL publishes on Page 2 of this issue a table which shows what the 20 year and 30 year retirement rates will be under the Military Pay Act of 1958, effective 1 June.

These rates apply only to officers who retire after that date.

On Page 3, the problem of what the Services intend to do about enlisted proficiency and officer responsibility pay is surveyed; more than $50,000,000 is involved in the answer.

Also on Page 3, there is a table which shows what total income of typical military personnel, including all pay and allowances, will be under the new legislation.

An editorial on Page 10 advises the Services of the personalities who are mainly responsible for the passage of the pay legislation.

The new pay legislation will mean increased benefits for thousands of Service widows, as shown on a specially prepared table published on Page 22.

Senator Stennis Renews Contributory Retirement Proposal For The Forces

The spectre of a revamped military retirement system, under which members of the Armed Forces would have to contribute to a retirement fund, loomed this week in the Senate.

Senator John C. Stennis (D-Miss.), who raised what is certain to be a controversial issue, suggested that Congress should give consideration to such a step.

He also recommended that those who retire early be penalized.

Senator Stennis, who headed the Senate Military Pay Subcommittee, made the remarks during floor debate on final passage of the military pay bill.

His statement came after the Senate

Majority and Minority Leaders had expressed the hope that Congress would take another look at retired military pay next year.

Republican Leader, Senator William Knowland (Calif.) said Senators have received communications from retired personnel who are unhappy because the 6% increase voted for those on the retired rolls does not maintain "the historic relationship between retired and active duty pay schedules."

He said: "I hope that at the next session of the Congress consideration may be given to the question of retired pay, and either the advisability or otherwise of maintaining that historic relationship."

Majority Leader Lyndon Johnson (D-Tex.) concurred. He said, "I, too, express the hope that the committee will give further consideration to the merits that may be involved in connection with retired pay."

Senator Stennis said there was "some disappointment" among some of those who worked on the pay bill "that the system of computing retirement had to

$10,000 Discrimination Against Service Academy Graduates Continues; Pentagon Ponders Problem After Pay Delay

THE Pentagon, which understandably sidetracked requests for remedial longevity legislation in order to streamline action on the pay bill, now must make up its mind what to do—if anything—about the continued pay discrimination against graduates of the Service Academies and ROTC programs.

Thousands of Academy and ROTC officers today are denied longevity pay benefits available to other officers.

The denial of longevity credit to these officers for time spent at the Academies and in ROTC programs creates a disparity of an estimated $10,000 for each officer over a 30 year career, based on the present pay scales.

Here is the story:

From 1884 to 1912, Service Academy time was counted for longevity pay purposes. Legislation passed in 1912 stipulated, however, that only active commissioned service could be counted.

The equity of this action was breached in 1942 with the passage of pay legislation authorizing longevity credit for active duty and virtually any and all inactive service in some 16 different Reserve components—but not Academy or ROTC time.

For example, officers who prepared for their commissions in V-12 and similar WWII programs receive longevity credit. So do those who graduate from Officer Candidate programs, or whose college time was spent while members of the Navy Reserve Officers Candidate Program and the Marine Corps Platoon Leaders Class.

Longevity credit is given also for Air Force and Navy aviation cadet programs. College students who are members of Reserve, National Guard, Air National Guard, or Coast Guard Reserve units also benefit.

A curious anomaly is that an Academy Cadet or Midshipman who fails an Academy course and then enlists in the Defense Department May Step In To Ease Service Confusion Over "Conflict" Laws

CONFUSION and conflicting Service policies confront and bewilder retired military officers who seek employment with the Government or with private firms doing business with the Government.

One critical problem is that the three Service Judge Advocates disagree on many points of law concerning dual compensation, dual employment and conflict of interest. In these areas, Pentagon legal authorities say, the three Services hold "almost irreconcilable positions."

The situation now is such that a retired officer from one Service could, under certain circumstances, forfeit his retired pay for selling a ten-cent comb to another Military Department, but suffer no penalty for signing a multi-million dollar research and development contract.

Officers from the other Services might be penalized if they performed either of these actions.

Further confusing the retired officers' problem are conflicting decisions of the House Committee Readies Measure

The House Armed Services Committee this week began the task of writing its Defense Reorganization Bill.

This was made possible when Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) ordered a halt to hearings which once seemed likely to go on for weeks.

It was obvious that Mr. Vinson and a majority of his associates believed they had heard enough testimony from Defense officials—the Service Secretaries weren't called—and were ready to take action.

At a news conference late last week, Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy, although not slamming the door shut on such a possibility, expressed confidence that the Reorganization Plan would not be bottled up in Committee and that consequently a streamlined legislative tactic would not be necessary.

It had been suggested that President Eisenhower might send the Reorganization Plan to Congress under the Reor-

Promotion Action; AF Augmentation

THE NAVY AND MARINE CORPS have told plans for the consideration of thousands of officers for higher ranks. Newly released are the names of 212 Naval Reserve officers who will be integrated into the Regular Establishment. Page 6

THE AIR FORCE has named hundreds more Reserve officers for regular ranks under the Augmentation Program. Major categories of the new list include 149 majors (13 years service group); 349 captains (6 years); and 173 first lieutenants (2 years), as well as miscellaneous other appointments. Last week's issue of THE JOURNAL published the names of the SMA (144) and USNA (195) graduates of the class of '58 who will be commissioned in the Regular Air Force. Page 9

OTHER HIGHLIGHTS of this issue include a report on the Navy League, Page 27, and an article by Maj. Gen. Henry Viccellio, USAF, on TAC's preparations for global deployments in event of "local wars." Page 31

What The 1958 Military Pay Act Does

Here is what the new pay law does:

- Establishes a pay system designed to attract and retain young officers and enlisted men by providing substantial increases in pay for the senior ranks to which they can aspire.
- Creates two new officer pay grades, O-9 and O-10, with a top basic pay of $1,500 per month for three-star officers and $1,700 per month for four-star officers.
- Establishes a special pay category, $1,875 per month, for members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, including the JCS Chairman and the Commandant of the Marine Corps.
- Creates two new enlisted pay grades, E-8 and E-9, "to provide for a better delineation of responsibilities in the enlisted structure." The senior enlisted pay grade carries a top basic pay of $440 per month. The top basic pay for E-8's will be $380.
- Authorizes payment of "responsibility pay" to a maximum of about 14,300 officers (O-3 through O-6) serving in assignments of "extraordinary responsibility and critical necessity." The Services are not required to use this provision of the law, but if they should elect to do so, they may give five per cent of the officers in pay grade O-3 an additional $50 per month, ten per cent of the O-4's an extra $50 per month, ten per cent of the O-5's an additional $100 per month and ten per cent of the O-6's $150 extra per month.
- Raises survivor benefit payments.
- Increases reenlistment bonus.
- Increases retired pay six per cent for those on the retired rolls prior to 1 June 1958.
- Provides more substantial increases in retired pay for three- and four-star officers already on the retired rolls.
- Grants no pay increase to members of the Armed Forces with less than two years' service.
- Eliminates pay increases after normal promotion points in each rank.
- Retains special pay for doctors.
- Retains present hazardous duty pay rates.
- Provides a special pay scale for junior officers (O-1, O-2 and O-3) with four or more years' active enlisted service.
- Authorizes proficiency pay for enlisted men under two alternative systems. Under the first system, which the Services already have authority to use, men with special proficiency in a military skill, could be advanced to any enlisted pay grade and receive the pay, allowances and special or incentive pays of that grade. Under the second system, newly authorized by the pay law, men with special skills and top combat responsibilities could be given proficiency ratings of P-1, P-2 and P-3, together with additional monthly pay up to $50, $100 and $150, respectively.
- Provides a "savings clause" which will prevent any member of the Armed Forces from receiving less pay under the new law than he currently receives.

Contributory Retirement Talk Renewed On Capitol Hill

be somewhat altered from what it is presently. Always heretofore those who have retired have been permitted to recompute their retired pay on the new schedules carried in the legislation.

"The system of retirement being what it is, under which the Federal Government pays the entire bill, without any contribution being made by those who receive the retirement pay, and in light of the mounting cost of the system, which alone is running at about $600 million a year—and the passage of the pending bill even at the level we agreed on, will add $40 million a year, and in two or three or four more years, at some time between 1962 and 1965, the cost will be much higher—it was thought absolutely necessary that the matter be limited in the bill."

He noted that the conference report on the pay bill did not go into the subject, "but I believe we are at the point where we should give consideration to retired personnel making a contribution to the fund from which the retirement pay is paid."

He said such a step "would not apply to anyone who already has a vested position under the present law. However, it is one of the things Congress ought to consider in the future, and it should consider applying that principle with respect to additional pay, at least, even to present personnel. Congress ought to provide some kind of contribution. Otherwise this whole system can bog down, because of the enormous sums that will have to be paid out."

Representative Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex.), the top military pay authority in the House, has often warned that unless the military retirement program can be kept at a reasonable cost, economy-minded members of the Congress eventually will "take a meat axe" to it.

Major H. C. Johnson With 4600 Flight Hours Makes 27 Minutes Count For Height Record

Maj. Howard C. Johnson, USAF, is the current holder of the world altitude record for conventional aircraft.

The way things are going, however, his record of 91,249 feet made 7 May at Palm-dale, Calif., in a Lockheed F-104 Starfighter powered by a General Electric J-79 engine may not stand too long.

On 16 April, ECdr. George Watkins, USN, returned the world altitude mark to the United States—the record had been held by Great Britain—by zooming a Grumman F11F Tiger jet to 76,828.5 feet.

Commander Watkins, Assistant Head, Carrier Branch, Flight Test Division, NATC Patuxent River, Md., made his record flight out of Edwards AFB in California's Mojave Desert.

Then, the French reported a flight of 80,190 feet by an experimental Trident 06 at Istres.

Major Johnson, assigned to the Air Defense Command's Western Air Defense Force at Hamilton AFB, Calif., took off at 0940 PDT and landed at 1007 PDT, total flight of 27 minutes.

Major Johnson, 37, whose wife and children, Theodore Howard, 10, and Carol, 4, live at 1260 Cambridge Street, Novato, Calif., is assigned as Operations Officer of the 83rd Fighter-Interceptor Squadron at Hamilton.

He has been in Service since enlisting at Lexington, Ky., 1 April 1942. He has logged 4,600 hours of flying time, including 1,800 hours in jets.

PAY DELAY?

The Coast Guard must obtain Congressional authority for transfer of funds within its budget to implement the new pay rates in June.

There's enough money for the pay increases in the total Coast Guard appropriations, but not enough in the personnel allocation.

Authority for the transfer of funds is expected to be given speedily. Should there be a delay, however, Coast Guardsmen would have to wait until July to receive the added pay.

JOINTING Assistant Secretary of Defense William H. Francis, Jr. and General Nathan F. Twining (Page One) in saluting the passage of the Military Pay Act of 1958 were the top Service personnel officers of the Army and Navy.

Lt. Gen. Collins

Lt. Gen. James F. Collins, Army Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel, told THE JOURNAL: We welcome the passage of this pay legislation which incorporates so many modern compensation features. Its enactment should assist us materially in the increased attraction and retention of the skilled personnel and combat leaders required in a modern military force."

Speaking for the Navy, VAdm. Harold P. Smith, Chief of Naval Personnel, declared: "The pay raise for members of the Armed Forces provides a more adequate compensation for the increased responsibilities assumed and the special skills required by a Navyman in the course of his career. It is anticipated that skilled men will be encouraged to make a career of their chosen Service and thereby contribute materially to the safety and defense of their country."

$50 Million "Extra" Pay Increases Face Budget Bureau-Administrative Problems

DEFENSE Department authorities weren't certain this week when the first enlisted proficiency or officer responsibility pay increases—worth up to $150 per month—will be put into effect.

There's no question the Budget Bureau wants the Pentagon to go slowly because of the cost. And the Services themselves appear to be in no hurry whatsoever to implement the extra pay for officers.

Although the Administration asked for the enlisted proficiency pay, in accordance with the recommendations of the Cordier Committee, Pentagon spokesmen expressed opposition to additional incentives for selected officers, explaining such a program would be difficult to administer.

ments where there are especially high living costs.

Another possibility would be for the Services to give this extra pay to certain officers who would be chosen for higher ranks, but who could not be promoted because of a lack of vacancies. For example, a Service might choose more colonels (or Navy captains) for star rank than could be promoted. If these officers were filling billets of "extraordinary responsibility and critical necessity," they could be given the extra pay, pending their promotions.

In this approach, it is seen that there would be a minimum adverse impact on income when the extra pay was removed. In a military career, of course, an officer one day might be filling a position that meets the criteria, but not when he is transferred.

Still another possibility, of course, would be to leave it up to the individual Services to use part or all of 5% and 10% limitations as they see fit.

When all is said and done, the strong fact remains that the Services would have much preferred if responsibility pay had never been authorized. It is truly a "can of worms."

Navy Moves To Reduce "Unnecessary" Travel

In a move to pare back the cost of "unnecessary" travel of individuals proceeding to mobile units, VAdm. Harold P. Smith, Chief of Naval Personnel, has established a set of rules to be followed by commanding officers.

The Personnel Chief noted that "considerable travel funds are expended each year unnecessarily when individuals proceed to ports to join mobile units and must be transported further to other ports because the ship or unit is not at the location indicated in the orders."

In the future, commanding officers who are transferring personnel are to insure that the port to which a man is proceeding is clearly indicated and that the estimated reporting dates on the copies of standard transfer orders be sent to the new command if the date differs from the date by which the individual must "report not later than."

This information is to be obtained by interviewing the man moving to determine the exact amount of leave he plans to take within the minimum limit allowable.

In turn, commanding officers of mobile units receiving personnel are to review the copy of the orders of all incoming men to insure that they are reporting to the correct port. If the unit is slated to move before the arrival of the individual, immediate action is to be taken to notify the individual of the correct port to which he is to report.

Chart Shows Total Compensation In Typical Cases Under New Law

New pay rates for officers and warrant officers with selected years of service and time-in-grade are compared on the following chart with the present pay rates which end 31 May.

The complete new officer pay scale and details about increases provided for warrant officers and enlisted members of the Armed Forces were published in THE JOURNAL of 10 May following House and Senate conference approval of the new pay law.

Under the new pay rates, General Nathan F. Twining, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and General Thomas D. White, Chief of Staff of the Air Force, will receive $31,104 annually. Both draw hazardous duty pay.

Recomputation For Retired 3- And 4-Star Officers Adds $2,484 To Some Checks

Three- and four-star officers on the retired lists will receive pay increases of $128 and $207 per month in most cases under the terms of the new pay law.

In approving the recomputation of retired pay for generals, admirals, lieutenant generals and vice admirals, the Congress said this:

Officers in this category who are already retired, or who retire prior to 1 June 1958, will be permitted "to compute their retired pay on the basis of the active duty pay they would be entitled to receive if serving on active duty on the day before the effective date of this act."

Under existing law, vice admirals and lieutenant generals are entitled to an additional active duty pay of $100 per month, and four-star officers are entitled to an additional $200 per month. These amounts, however, are not used in determining retired pay.

Under the provisions of the new pay law, three-star officers already retired "will be authorized to compute their retired pay on the basis of an additional $100 per month pay plus the six-per cent increase in retired pay provided for all other retired personnel; and four-star admirals and generals will be authorized to compute their retired pay on the basis of $200 per month additional pay plus retired is limited to those officers who the six-per cent increase provided for retired personnel.

As a result, three-star officers already retired will receive a maximum retired pay of $935 per month, compared with present pay of $807.

The typical four-star officer, already retired, will receive a maximum retired pay of $1,014 per month, compared with present pay of $807.

The Congress said the recomputation will acknowledge the fact that these officers served in positions of high responsibility, and will in "slight" measure recognize "their service in these higher grades."

Officers serving in these grades on or after 1 June will compute their retired pay on the basis of the new pay scales.

The recomputation for officers already served on active duty in the higher grades for a period of six months or more.

Some Likely Approaches

Should the Pentagon decide to use the authority for officer responsibility pay—or be "influenced" to take such action, there are some likely approaches to the problem.

One possibility is to use the authority for the extra pay to give additional benefits to officers in vital, but isolated positions—in effect, a "hardship pay." This might apply to officers on duty at remote places, such as Antarctica, or on assign-

Army Order Means $1.5 Million Pay For More Than 450 On Retired List

THE Army has issued a Special Order (No. 88) giving increased rank on the retired list to more than 450 officers. It means a pay adjustment of more than $1,500,000.

The action follows the Comptroller General decision (B-123643) supporting a Court of Claims ruling (U. S. vs. Tracy) in which the Court held that officers holding higher rank than the rank in which they were serving at time of retirement are entitled to the increased status.

The Army said it has notified each officer by individual letter of the action. The names of the officers receiving higher rank and increased pay are published on page 14.

Army Promotes 278 To Temporary Ranks

The Army, in Special Orders 96, effective 13 May, has promoted four to colonel—Townsend C. Anderson, Carl N. DeVaney, William F. Jackson and Frederick T. Kent, Jr., and 88 to lieutenant colonel, 79 to major, and 77 to captain.

The cutoff date to colonel was 7 September 1950 with 176 months and 9 days service as of 30 June 1955. Cutoff for lieutenant colonel was 27 December 1950 with 175 months and 19 days service as of 30 June 1957.

The cutoff date to major was 27 November 1950 with 86 months service as of 30 June 1955.

The cutoff for captain was 20 July 1953.

THE MISSILE MEN

From the earliest Assyrian "artillery missile"—with the flint-tipped warhead and hawk feathers for a guidance system—the fate of nations has been in the hands of the missile men.

Today, our strength in military missilery may hold the key to survival.

Martin based its long-range planning on that probability in 1946 with the development of one of this nation's first successfully operational guided missiles. The result is the total missile concept.

Under this concept, far more is involved in missile system contracting than the design and production of hardware:

The testing, packaging, delivery, maintenance, launching, operation, field training and contractor service requirements make up the total story of missile performance...in the air, and operated by the military personnel.

The heavy demands of our country's greatly accelerated missile and space development programs now emphasize the importance of Martin's total capabilities as a major resource for the military and astroscientific branches of the government.

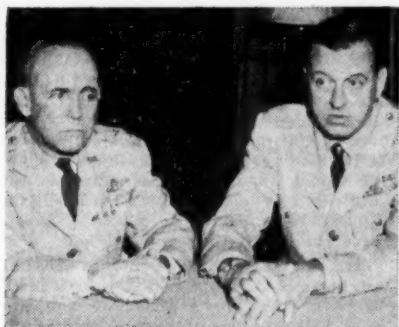

Among those capabilities are three plant facilities which include the newest and most advanced missile development centers in the world.

Also part of these Martin capabilities is one of the great U. S. resources in manpower: More than 3,000 specialist engineers, trained and teamed in the total missile concept.

This is one of the few systematically organized companies of genuine Missile Men in the country.

Board Meets 1 July For Perm. Lieutenants

The Air Force will convene a board 1 July to consider Regular and Reserve second lieutenants for permanent promotion.

Eligible are officers who complete three years promotion list service during the period 1 Oct. through 31 Dec. 1958.

In the future, second lieutenant boards will meet during the first week of each quarter to consider officers for promotion approximately three to six months in advance of the date on which they complete three years promotion list service.

L/Col. Kenna Leaves D.C. For Wright-Patterson

Lt. Col. Wilfred P. Kenna, USAF, Professor of Air Science at the Catholic University of America, Washington, D. C., will report to Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, 15 August as Chief of the Military Personnel Division, 3079 Aviation Depot Wing.

He will be succeeded by Lt. Col. Delos E. Richard, reporting in July from SAC Headquarters, Offutt AFB, Neb. Colonel Kenna is married to the former Maxine Neilson of Dend, Oregon. They have three children, a daughter, Eileen, and two sons, Timothy and Pat.

AF WILL Spend More Than $150 Million For 15 Bomarc-SAGE Sites In The U. S.

The Air Force has asked authority for construction of more than $150 million to strengthen the nation's air defenses.

Congress has been asked to approve 10 sites for the Boeing Bomarc missile at costs of $13.5 million each at or near Langley AFB, Va., Kinross AFB, Mich., Niagara Falls, N. Y., Truxal Field, Wisc., Duluth, Minn., and Ethan Allen AFB, Vt.

Three $10 million Bomarc sites are planned at Paine AFB, Wash., Camp Adair, Oreg., Travis AFB, Calif., and Cooke AFB, Calif.

Also requested are funds to build

SAGE technical facilities at five U. S. sites.

Semi-Automatic Ground Environment System facilities are scheduled for the Albuquerque, N. M., area, $6.83 million; Robins AFB, Ga., $6.69 million; Seymour Johnson AFB, N. C., $6.59 million; Sioux City Municipal Airport, Iowa, $6.9 million and Webb AFB, Tex., $6.76 million.

The funds would provide for building a Direction Center Building at each site. SAGE provides for the automatic processing of air surveillance information derived from radar detection stations, as well as providing control and direction of interceptor aircraft and missiles.

"Middleman" Out In Logistics Move

The Air Force is going to reduce its supply and maintenance facilities in Europe.

Air Force units in Europe now will order most of their supplies direct from the Air Materiel Command depots in this country. Up to this time the Air Force has maintained large stock piles of supplies at its overseas depots.

The Air Force stated that "the phase down of the depots is possible because of improved communications, high speed transportation, and extensive use of maintenance contractor facilities in foreign countries."

On 1 July 1958 the Northern Air Materiel Area (NAMA) at Burtonwood, England and the Southern Air Materiel Area (SAMA) at Nouasseur, Morocco, will have ceased to operate as depots. A small predominately civilian force will remain at each location for an indefinite period to take care of final disposition of stocks. Stations at Bordeaux and Moulins, France and Sealand in Wales have already been closed as part of the plan.

Also included in the plan is a change in location for Headquarters Air Materiel Force, European Area (AMFEA) at Wiesbaden, Germany. It moves to Chateauroux, France this month and will take over the facilities and all of the functions of the Central Air Materiel Area (CAMA) there. CAMA will cease to exist as a separate activity.

Headquarters AMFEA will represent the Air Materiel Command in the European area. It will also assume functions of the depots phasing out that cannot be immediately transferred to AMC facilities in the geographical United States.

The Air Force said: "Basically this action eliminates the middleman in the logistics operation."

Chaplain (Brig. Gen.) Terence P. Finnegan has been named by President Eisenhower to succeed Chaplain (Major Gen.) Charles I. Carpenter as Air Force Chief of Chaplains 15 August.

Chaplain Carpenter, who will have held the post for 10 years on 11 June, will become Protestant Chaplain at the U. S. Air Force Academy with the rank of colonel.

Named to succeed Chaplain Finnegan as Deputy Chief is Chaplain (Col.) Robert P. Taylor, a Silver Star winner at Bataan, who has been Chief of the Personnel Division, Office, Chief of Chaplains.

Father Finnegan, born 21 March 1904 at Norwich, Conn., joined the Service in 1937, and was awarded the Bronze Star Medal during WWII for service at Guadalcanal.

On 12 April 1956, Chaplain Finnegan was appointed by His Holiness Pope Pius XII as a Domestic Prelate with the title of Right Reverend Monsignor.

Chaplain Carpenter, a Methodist, was made Air Chaplain of the Army Air Forces in 1942, and from 1944 to December 1945 was Staff Chaplain U. S. Strategic Air Force in Europe, after which he was reassigned as Air Chaplain of the AAF before becoming Chief of Air Force Chaplains.

THREE ROMAN CATHOLIC PRIESTS will be serving as Chiefs of Chaplains in the Armed Forces this summer. Maj. Gen. Patrick J. Ryan has been Army Chief since 1 May 1954. RADM. George A. Rosso becomes Navy Chief in June, succeeding RADM. Edward B. Harp, Jr.

Gen. Bunker's Retirement Means Top I. G. Shifts

Lt. Gen. Elmer J. Rogers, Jr., Inspector General, has announced high level changes in the Air Force Inspector General's Office when Maj. Gen. Howard G. Bunker, Deputy Inspector General for Inspection, retires 31 July.

Maj. Gen. Jack W. Wood, Director, Readiness and Materiel Inspection, will move up to fill the vacancy created by General Bunker's retirement. Brig. Gen. William G. Hipps, Deputy Director, Readiness and Materiel Inspection, will move into the vacancy left by General Wood.

Maj. Gen. Joseph D. C. Caldara, Director, Flight Safety Research; Brig. Gen. Edward B. Gallant, Director, Procurement Inspection; and Brig. Gen. Earl Maxwell, Chief, Medical Services Inspection Division, D/RMI, will remain in their present positions for the time being.

Pay Had Understanding and Cooperative Backers

The sympathetic understanding of a great number of people and their willingness to work together turned the tide of the battle for Service pay improvements from defeat to victory in less than a year.

Foremost in the fighting front was Mr. Ralph J. Cordiner, Chairman of the Board of General Electric, and the members of his committee who worked long and diligently to formulate the new plan and then refused to let it die when most others had given it up for lost. When the Administration was willing to sacrifice the benefits of the new plan to keep down its budget, Mr. Cordiner kept plugging its benefits and stirring up the subject in public print. When Congressional hearings were finally opened he gave his hardest hitting punches.

When the Administration was still frowning on the initial cost of the pay plan, Senators Stuart Symington (D-Mo) and Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz) introduced the entire Cordiner plan as a Senate Bill. They did not stop there; they grasped every opportunity to talk about its benefits and the need for its enactment.

In the House, Representative Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex), chairman of the Subcommittee in charge, and its senior Republican, Representative Leon H. Gavin (Pa), worked so well that when the measure reached the floor of the House, it was promptly passed by the startling vote of 366 to 22. In both the full committee and on the floor, Representative Carl Vinson, chairman, and the Committee Counsel Lt. Col. John R. Blandford, USMCR, worked to perfect the measure and to make clear its benefits to all members.

In the Senate, where the bill was approved without a dissenting vote (87-0), special credit should be given to Senator John C. Stennis (D-Miss) and Senator Leverett Saltonstall (R-Mass) and also to Maj. T. Edward Braswell, jr., USAFR, of the Committee Staff.

In the presentation of the measure, Assistant Secretary of Defense William H. Francis, jr., in his first major appearance before Congress, did an excellent job that improved as he went along. Maj. Gen. Harold R. Maddux, USAF, whose work with the plan went back to the beginning of the Cordiner study, likewise contributed heavily, as did Col. James M. Keck, USAF, and Lt. Col. Leo Benade, USA.

THE JOURNAL, too, feels that its constant hammering on the subject and the support it gave the plan during the dark months when most others had given it up for lost, contributed significantly to its ultimate revival and enactment.

Congress as a whole deserves a major share of credit for its action in boosting the rates originally submitted by the Administration and giving those already retired even a token six percent increase when the Administration had acted to cut them off entirely.

Legal Maze Confuses Employment of Retired

A most serious effect of the plethora of laws which bar retired officers from many categories of employment is that it prevents industry and the government from making use of the skill and experience of this outstanding group of trained executives. This is particularly important at this time when our shortage of manpower in many professional areas is a matter of grave concern.

As the article on the first page of this issue reveals, the dual compensation, dual employment, and conflict of interest laws, many of which date back into the 19th century, prevent the government and industry from utilizing these valuable men and, at the same time, hold the retired officers back from incomes which could supplement their small retired pay.

The Department of Defense would do well to initiate a complete re-study of the entire problem with a view to presenting Congress with a comprehensive report of the evils of the present laws and recommendations for repeal.

New Bill Boosts Survivor Benefits

Application of the new pay law rates to the widows and other survivors of service personnel is one of its most welcome effects. As reported on page 22 of this issue, the new pay rates will result in increasing the payments to a majority of officers' widows from $2 to $95 per month.

The new rates apply to those now on the rolls as well as to those who qualify for benefits after the law becomes effective. This is because the statutes governing survivor benefits specify that the benefits shall be based on the active pay scales in effect at the time the payments are made. On the other hand, Service personnel already on the retired list (except for three- and four-star officers) continue to be based on the old law with a mere six per cent token increase. A proper solution would be to base retired pay laws on current active duty rates, so that the present inequitable treatment of retired could not occur again.

READERS' VIEWS

■ It makes little sense for Congress to pass a pay bill granting increases to the upper grades designed to encourage personnel to remain in service to reach these heights and then design a promotion system to prevent an individual from reaching higher rank. Under the table of Army promotion time, set out in your 3 May issue, by 1963 an officer would be retired by operation of law before reaching the average promotion time to full Colonel—a total of 35 years. This is of course impossible.

The party making these estimates went out of his way to throw cold water on the whole reason for the new pay structure. This is of particular concern in view of the Air Force projections as compared to the Army.

Was a deal made to hold down promotions in order to get a pay bill passed? If so, let's stay where we are rather than go backward.

JOHN JAY DOUGLASS
MAJOR SAC

■ For several months it looked like everyone, without any dissenting voices, was putting in a pay bill to restore Field Grade pay to a competitive level with industry—getting in the direction of the very respectable level of 1940 & before.

Mr. Cordiner, Senator Symington and others, and even the Defense Department put in for $260 plus raise for Lt. Col. with 16 years service (or 6 years in grade.) Looked very good—no objections from anyone.

Suddenly the House of Representatives whacked off $160 of that $260. And a similar blow to Colonels! It seemed out of a blue sky. And I have read of no one raising a squeak.

I could take volumes to make a strong case—mainly in comparison with the real plush pay check of a Field Grade officer before World War II—in comparison with civilian industry pay; now the reverse holds true, etc., etc., etc. What happened? Why no objections?

Thank you for your vigorous campaigns. But in this one a Lt. Col. with over 18 years service will take home only about $60 a month more under the new bill than he did in Dec. 1956.

$108 raise minus $18-$20 for Social Security & loss of free insurance & minus about $25 plus for taxes.

LT. COL., USA

■ I enjoyed seeing the 3 May issue of the ARMY NAVY AIR FORCE JOURNAL and was especially pleased, of course, about your use of the photograph taken with Colonel Thorvaldson at Andrews AFB... Thanks so much.

MILTON CANIFF

THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—The XF-85, Air Force parasite jet fighter, has been rolled out of the builder's plant at St. Louis, Mo., for ground tests. The XF-85 never actually touched the ground, as it has no wheels of its own and was "rolled out" on a specially constructed dolly. It will be based on a larger plane and take off and land while in mid-air.

50 Years Ago—The bounty for reenlistment is a most wise feature of the Army Appropriation Bill... The bonus—the sum of $45—can be a very potent argument right at that juncture when the soldier is deciding whether he will continue in the Service or take his chances in private life.

90 Years Ago—It was a wise, a worthy, a grateful, and a patriotic inspiration, which suggested the establishment of that most beneficent and successful charity, the National Asylum for disabled volunteer soldiers. Its achieved results have already indicated the excellence of the scheme and promise abundantly for the future.

■ Down thru the years, in preaching the advantages of "career" service, the Army, in its efforts to rerecruit underpaid personnel, has stressed the fact that we were serving not only for pay to cover ever present and ever increasing personal obligations, but also were under a contract with the "great white father" at Washington, immutably protecting us and ours for time and eternity. It was reiterated some millions of times and written more and more times in recruiting literature that we would forever be imbursed at ¾ the active duty pay of like grade and longevity effective at time of retirement or thereafter to become effective.

Now comes The Commander in Chief, representing the "great white father" and, with due whereof and whereas, recommends to the Congress that it enact ex post facto provision of law to deprive us of our already sweated out stipend of retirement. Seems that the CIC has further alerted the Congress that he will promptly sign if we are limited to 6% of our long ago earned raise, just as he did on the other EPP six percent.

CARLISLE BARRACKS WILL BE 201

One of the oldest active military installations in the United States, Carlisle Barracks, Pa., marks the 201st anniversary of its founding 30 May.

Founded by Col. John Stanwix of the British Army, with a mixed force of British Army regulars and Provincial troops 30 May 1757, Carlisle Barracks is the home of the Army's senior educational institution, the Army War College. A school post almost since its founding, a school for artillerymen, was founded there by Capt. Isaac Coren in 1777, by direction of General George Washington.

Maj. Gen. Max S. Johnson is the present Commanding General and Commandant of the War College. Brig. Gen. Edgar C. Doleman is Deputy Commandant of the College. Deputy Post Commander is Col. Alvin A. Heidner.

Pentagon May Act To Ease "Conflict Of Interests" Confusion In The Services

and Comptroller General, both of whom can override retired policies set by the Military Departments.

To avoid risking their retired pay and rights, and even stiff jail terms, retired military people must place their primary reliance upon the decisions of their respective Judge Advocates. These authorities, in turn, concede they are not quite sure of what many of the laws affecting retired people really mean.

As a consequence of this muddled state of affairs, it can be expected that the Department of Defense soon will take a hand in straightening out post-service employment problems for retired military officers. It will not be able to achieve complete uniformity among all the Services, officials say, because some conflict of interest laws apply only to the Service.

Urgent Necessity

The urgent requirement for clear-cut decisions is pointed up in new charges by the President of the New York City Bar Association. He said the present conflict of interest laws "provide loopholes for the unscrupulous and traps for the honest but unwary."

President Louis M. Loeb of the New York Bar group declared this week that most of the conflict of interest laws were enacted in "earlier, simpler days." Now, he said, they are inadequate to protect the Government from subtle forms of corruption and unreasonably discourage persons from taking Government positions.

Mr. Loeb's assertions were nothing new for retired military officers. They have been confounded by similar restrictions for decades.

Similar attacks on the dual compensation, dual employment, and conflict of interest laws echo yearly through the halls of Congress, but with little practical effect.

More Than 35 Statutes

Pinpointing the need for revision of the statutes relating to the employment of retired military officers, Representative Craig Hosmer (R-Calif.) told the House Representatives last year that "at least 35 dual employment and dual compensation statutes are now in effect. It is a practical impossibility to administer them, let alone avoid repeated cases of inadvertent hardship and injustice. This is a situation badly needing a remedy." The Pentagon in 1956 went before Congress to urge outright repeal of the dual employment and dual compensation statutes.

Service officials described the laws as extremely complicated, "discriminatory," "overlapping," and "unrealistic." Chairman Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex.), of the Special House Armed Services Subcommittee which considered the 1956 charges, agreed that "there is room for considerable improvement."

None has been forthcoming. At present, the scores of unrelated restrictions on the employment of retired officers add up to a series of ever-tightening barriers. Lack of knowledge about any of these might cost an officer loss of retired pay, a stiff jail sentence, or

94 Barrier Still Up

The basic restrictions upon post-service employment of retired military officers prohibits them from holding Government positions if either their retired pay or Government salary would equal or exceed $2,500 per year. Contained in the Dual Employment Act of 1894 (28 Stat. 265, as amended, 5 U.S.C. 62), these restrictions apply almost exclusively to regular officers and warrant officers retired for length of service.

Enlisted men advanced to officer grade on retirement, pursuant to an act of Congress, do not usually fall under the prohibitions of the Act. If, however, they are appointed as officers on the Retired list by the President, they become subject to the dual employment limitations.

Reserve and National Guard officers are not restricted by the 64-year-old statute. This discrimination is reserved solely for Regulars with at least 20 years' service.

Exemptions to the Dual employment Act, if listed together, might fill a good sized telephone book. They apply to: elected officials of the Federal Government; officials appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate, certain types of temporary employment; and a multitude of other positions exempted by the Congress, Courts, and Comptroller General.

The Second Big Hurdle

When and if a retired officer finds he is eligible for Government employment under the Dual Employment Act of 1894, he has only jumped the first hurdle. The next step to clear is the Dual Compensation Act (47 Stat. 406, as amended, 5 U.S.C. (Supp. IV) 59a (1955)), which dates to the 1932 depression.

This Act basically provides that when the combined retired pay and pay from a civilian Government job exceeds $10,000, the officer affected must forfeit any

FAVORABLE DECISION

Lt. Col. C. W. Griffin, USAF-Ret., has convinced the Comptroller General to ease dual compensation restrictions on his disability retired pay.

He had asked to exclude his USIA overseas salary differential from the computation of the "annual rate of compensation" under the dual compensation statute. In decision B-135734, the Comptroller consented.

As a result, overseas salary differentials will no longer be counted within the $10,000 combined pay restriction for retired military officers when they hold Government positions.

portion of his retired pay which brings him over the limit. If the civilian job pays $10,000, he forfeits all his retired pay for the period concerned. If it is less, he may receive only the difference between his civilian salary and the $10,000 limit.

The Dual Compensation Act does not apply to retired warrant officers, retired Reserve, or retired National Guard officers.

Also exempted from its provisions are: officers retired for disability incurred either in combat or by an instrumentality of war during specified periods of hostilities; and officers who pursue intermittent employment on a fee basis, when the job is not considered to be an "office or position" of the United States.

Comptroller Overrules Court

Other types of intermittent and temporary Government employment may fall under the prohibitions of this Act and could result in a pro-rated forfeiture of the officer's retired pay during the period of his employment.

Disability retired officers who are not covered in the initial exemptions of the Dual Compensation Act, have been able to get around it by waiving their retired pay in favor of receiving Veterans Administration compensation. By doing this they avoid all salary restrictions.

A wider area of Government employment would be open to retired officers if the Comptroller General followed U. S. Court of Claims and Supreme Court decisions defining an "office of the United States." These decisions would allow all retired officers to work for corporations wholly-owned by the U. S., such as the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The Comptroller has been adamant. He says that retired Regular officers cannot work for these corporations. The Military Departments have abided by the Comptroller's decisions.

Another Way Out?

From the foregoing it appears that the retired officer's problem of post-service employment might easily be solved by completely forgetting about Government employment and seeking a position in private industry. This is far from true.

Rising from the dark crevasses of the U. S. Code come the conflict of interest statutes, which follow him wherever he may go. These statutes should be etched upon the mind of every retired officer, for they apply even to the most unlikely situations.

As a starter, all retired Regular officers are prohibited for two years after retirement from selling, contracting to sell, or negotiating to sell "any supplies or war materials" to any of the Services, the Defense Department, Coast Guard, or Coast and Geodetic Survey. The penalty for violating this law (67 Stat. 437, 5 U. S. C. (Supp. IV) 59c (1953)) is loss of retired pay.

Navy authorities consider supplies and war materials to include any conceivable item, including "Pocket Combs and soft drinks." An "important exception" is made by the Navy in the case of professional services, "such as plans, specifications, designs or drawings," which it does not consider to be supplies of war materials within the meaning of the above statute.

This presents the interesting possibility of one retired Navy officer being deprived of his pay for selling a comb to the Air Force, while another may continue to receive full pay and benefits when contracting for research contracts, plans, specifications, designs, drawings or any other professional services.

Air Force officials interpret the above statute more strictly. They say they could not follow the Navy interpretation. If an Air Force officer were selling drawings to the Navy, within two years after retirement they said, his retired pay would be stopped immediately. In some cases, they said, they would ask for a Comptroller General ruling on the subject.

Army authorities report they are still researching the point of what constitutes "supplies and materials" within the meaning of the conflict of interest restriction.

The Road To Jail

Added restrictions on retired officers' activities are imposed by the criminal conflict of interest laws, especially the one contained in 18 U.S.C. 281 (1949).

This statute provides a $10,000 fine or up to two years in jail if an officer represents anyone, including himself, in the sale of anything to the Government through the Department in which he holds retired status.

The effect of this restriction is disputed among Service legal authorities.

Specific quarrel with this provision is taken by the Navy in its "Reference Guide To Employment Activities Of Retired Naval Personnel." Here the Navy Judge Advocate notes that of all the major laws restricting the employment activities of retired officers, "these criminal statutes are the most ambiguous and it is often extremely difficult to predict with any degree of certainty whether proposed activities will violate these provisions."

The Navy says, in effect, it does not know what the statutes mean. Retired Navy officers may not learn what the statute means until they find themselves in trouble—possibly even in newly-issued, striped uniforms.

Similar criminal statutes apply to officers who, within two years after retirement, act as agents or attorneys or who assist in prosecuting claims against the United States, especially when they concern subject matter with which the officer was directly connected while on active duty. (18 U.S.C. 283 (1949)) These provisions seem to hit especially hard at JAG officers.

No Action In Congress

With regard to dual employment and dual compensation revisions, little action is expected in this session of Congress. A number of bills have been introduced and referred to committees, but have been given no further consideration.

Prospects for revision of Federal conflict of interest policies are better as a result of a recently issued special staff report on the subject to the House Judiciary Committee.

The Judiciary report emphasizes that "existing conflict of interest law comprises overlapping, inconsistent, and incomplete provisions, which not only differ among themselves with respect to the classes of persons covered, but are also subject to numerous general and special exemptions. These exemptions in turn often contain their own limitations on exempted conduct."

"Despite the importance of the subject which today affects millions of Americans directly," the report continues, "there has been little judicial interpretation on the conflict of interest statutes, and almost no such interpretation of the exemptions and their scope."

"All this," the report concludes, "makes existing laws extremely difficult to construe."

No legislation has yet been introduced to implement the report's recommendations for a sweeping revision of the conflict of interest area.

THE SERVICES WILL BE ABLE by early summer to advise Congress of significant increases in retention rates. Preliminary studies show that the re-up rate has been on the rise during recent weeks—doubtless in large part the result of anticipated pay increases. With the enactment of the legislation, there's no question that retention rates will spurt ahead. Although the $2000 career reenlistment bonus ceiling remains in effect, Servicemen will be able to collect that total earlier in their careers—another impetus to reenlistments at the critical time of completion of initial tours.

THERE HAVE BEEN TIMES in the past when the Defense Department has been remiss in advising Congress about the impact of important personnel legislation. This won't be the case with the pay action. SecDef McElroy and Assistant SecDef Francis likely will make preliminary informal reports on the personnel retention situation to the Armed Services Committees prior to Congressional adjournment.

A HIGHER PRICETAG must be placed on the Military Pay Act than the widely reported $576,438,000. This is because the new rates will mean increases—up to $95 per month—for hundreds of Service widows (Page 22). Although the Act is effective 1 June, the widows probably will have to wait until August or September to receive the higher benefits.

MORNING REPORT action in the Army will be speeded if a test at Ft. Sill, Okla., proves successful. The Army is experimenting with use of IBM transceiver equipment to make morning report data available to Washington in a matter of hours, instead of days or weeks.

IT'S HIGHLY UNLIKELY that any officer who reverts to enlisted status, as a result of "RIF" programs, will be given the new E-8 or E-9 super grades. They will be reserved exclusively for career enlisted men. Regulations say that officers reverting to EM status shall be given their permanent EM rank; no officer obviously has a permanent E-8 or E-9 status.

ENLISTED PROMOTIONS ARE CERTAIN to suffer during the next fiscal year as a result of manpower cutbacks and the prospective increase in reenlistments as a result of the pay legislation. The Services are hopeful that DoD may raise the present restrictions on strengths in the top four enlisted grades. The E-8 and E-9 ranks will help some, but it's still a question of how many dollars are allocated for the top EM grades.

THERE WILL BE LESS MEN—but maybe more women—in the Army next year. Although Army strength drops from 900,000 to 870,000, budget plans call for a buildup of WAC strength from 7800 to 8500. House Appropriation Committee members make the point that perhaps the Army should use the extra billets for male soldiers, particularly since during recent years the WAC has—16 years old on 14 May—not been able to meet its recruiting goals. Explanation for the projected fiscal '59 increase is that the 8500 figure is within the 2% statutory limitation on WAC strength.

PAY BILL DISCRIMINATION will be felt by members of the Coast Guard. Their Commandant, VAdm. Alfred C. Richmond, will not benefit from the special pay rates authorized for the other Service Chiefs.

ONE CURRENT DIFFICULTY with Venezuela can be traced to recent actions by the Department of Defense and Military Petroleum Supply Agency in imposing new discriminations on the purchase of foreign petroleum fuels by the Services. Previously exempt from the Buy American Act, these fuels must now compete with American products at more than a 6% artificial price handicap.

REORGANIZATION BILL TESTIMONY has brought to light instances where civilian Assistant Secretaries of Defense were provided with information—some of it concerning critical nuclear energy matters—that was not made available to the Services. Don't be surprised if Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) makes a strong point of these foul-ups when his Armed Services Committee reports a reorganization bill.

THE PENTAGON'S "WHITE CHARGER" PLAN, which would accelerate the forced retirement of many Regular officers is seen as having no more than a 50-50 chance of enactment this session. First of all, the Budget Bureau is not too keen about the measure, since it will raise retirement costs. There is some influential support for the plan in the Senate Armed Services Committee, but in the House Committee the attitude is different—largely because of the cost factor.

ARMY WITNESSES called to testify on "White Charger" would find themselves in an embarrassing position. Unlike the Air Force and Navy, which favor consideration of Regulars for retention or retirement after 20 years service, the Army maintains this goes against the efforts to raise career attractiveness. Main reason that the Services are in dispute over "White Charger" is the fact that the Air Force and the Navy, particularly the latter, have much more rugged "hump" problems than the Army. More forced retirements would help relieve the lack of balance in the Air Force and Navy retirements.

THE NEXT FEW MONTHS will see hundreds of enlisted men and officers applying for voluntary retirement now that the pay bill has been passed. Insurance salesmen and others who approach military personnel in the future will have to find out when they retired—before or after 1 June—to ascertain individual incomes. Those now on the retired lists, with the exception of three- and four-star officers, get only a 6% increase; retirements after 1 June carry the new pay rates.

THERE'S NO DOUBT that a strong effort will be made in the next session of Congress to remedy the discrimination against retired persons. Senators and Representatives are hearing in no uncertain terms from constituents on the military retired rolls. Unlike active duty personnel, retired military people don't move around; their votes count.

ONE PERIL IN CONSIDERATION of legislation to restore traditional pay principles for retired persons is the certainty that this move will be accompanied by new Congressional demands that a contributory retirement system be established for the Armed Forces. Retirement costs are certain to go over the billion dollar a year mark in the next decade. The Services should begin now to prepare their defenses against attacks on the present retirement system. It's been a wide open secret for years that some Budget Bureau career officials have wanted—but so far failed—to force a contributory retirement system on the Fighting Forces.

WAC Is "Sweet 16"; Fills Missile Posts

The WAC, which reached a WWII peak strength of 100,000 and which now includes about 8,000 members under Col. Mary L. Milligan, celebrates a "sweet sixteen" birthday 14 May.

Trained by the Martin Company, a group of enlisted WAC are serving with the first Missile Master unit at Ft. Meade, Md., as trackers and plotters and radar console operators.

The WAC Center is located at Ft. McClellan, Ala., where all enlisted women receive an eight-week basic course. The WAC School there conducts the Clerical Procedures and Typing Course for enlisted personnel, WAC Officer Basic Course and the WAC Officer Advanced Course.

NATIONAL VAN LINES, INC.

"Ocean-Van" service

the safe, speedy, MODERN way to move overseas!

SAFE! National Van Lines assumes responsibility for your move! No "buck-passing"—claims are settled promptly!

SPEEDY! National Van Lines "Ocean-Van" Service moves you two to three times faster! Does away with the "horse and buggy" type of pack-and-crate move!

MODERN! The "Ocean-Van" is a weatherproof container carefully padded to provide a safe cushion for as much as five rooms of furniture!

TRANSPORTATION OFFICERS PLEASE NOTE:

"Ocean-Van" service offers protection to a higher valuation than thirty cents per pound per article at a nominal cost to the property owner! In most cases this eliminates costly and time-consuming claims against the government!

For full details, contact your local NVL agent, or Dept. D, National Van Lines, Inc., National Plaza, Broadview, Illinois (in Chicagoland).

Reorganization Action Hits Critical Point; Some Hope Seen For Favorable Compromise

From first page—

ganization Act procedure, in which case it would become law after 60 days unless rejected by Congress.

This approach was used in the 1953 Reorganization.

There is no question that the House Armed Services Committee will make a number of changes in the President's legislation.

When its report is released, the dispute between President Eisenhower and opponents of his plan, led by Chairman Vinson, will be joined.

Some observers, however, see the possibility of compromises being reached without an all-out legislative scrap on the floor of the House.

If it comes to that, the Administration has some strong supporters, including Chairman Clarence Cannon (D-Mo.) of the House Appropriations Committee.

Major areas of difference were brought out during the testimony. Chairman Vinson and others on the House Committee, question, for example, the language concerning the expanded authority of the Secretary of Defense to abolish, or transfer functions of the Services.

There is much reluctance among legislators also to remove the phrase which says that the Services are to be "separately administered."

Still another problem area is the size of the expanded Joint Staff of the JCS. The Administration did not indicate specifically how much of an increase over the present ceiling of 210 is desired. Obviously, the Administration would prefer if no fixed limit were set, but it's also obvious that the House Committee will set some ceiling—possibly 400.

The status of the Assistant Secretaries of Defense is another matter which the Committee will explore in detail in its closed door meetings.

A bill sponsored by Chairman Vinson, Representative Paul Kilday (D-Tex.), and Representative Leslie Arends (R-Ill.), who is the minority Whip of the House, would give relatively more authority to the Service Secretaries and less to the Assistant Secretaries of Defense than they have at present.

The Administration point of view is in the opposite direction.

One factor that is of much importance in the controversial situation is the high regard in which the House Armed Services Committee holds Secretary of Defense Neil H. McElroy. He, in turn, has conceded that Congress may wish to change some of the wording of the legislation, but he has insisted, as has the President, that no fundamental changes in the bill should be made.

Next week should well tell the story of whether the Reorganization Plan will provoke a heated hassle in the House, or whether it will be possible for both sides to attain a position in which each can claim success.

Here Are New Survivor Benefit Payments Which Take Effect 1 June; Checks Won't Be Ready Before August Or September

INCREASED survivor benefit payments go into effect 1 June as a result of enactment of the new military pay law.

For the majority of officers' widows, the increases range from $2 to $95 per month. However, some widows of both officers and enlisted personnel—those whose husbands served over-long in grade—will receive no increase.

Checks reflecting the increases probably will not go out to survivors until August or September, but the increases will be retroactive to 1 June.

The delay in immediately boosting the checks of those already on the survivor benefit rolls stems from the fact that the Pentagon is required to go over all records and certify the new payments to the Veterans Administration. This work, Defense Department sources told THE JOURNAL, is expected to take at least two months.

As soon as the V.A. receives the new certifications, it will be able to start paying the increases, despite the fact that it has no money specifically earmarked for the bigger survivor benefits. The pay bill itself did not contain funds for the increases in survivor benefits. The President will have to ask for a supplemental appropriation to pay the added cost.

Although no details have been released about the increases, THE JOURNAL has compiled a table which shows the amounts widows of officers currently are receiving and the amount they will receive under the new pay law.

As indicated in the table, the largest survivor benefit payment which would be available to the widow of a second lieutenant who dies after 1 June 1958 would be $150, and the widow of a first lieutenant, $158. These payments will be slightly lower than the rates now in effect, but a "savings clause" in the pay law prevents survivors from receiving less under the new law than they are now receiving.

Payments to widows of junior officers (O-1, O-2 and O-3) who had completed at least four years' active enlisted service before commissioning, will differ from those of widows of other officers in the same pay grades. This results from the separate pay table which is provided in the new law for junior officers with former enlisted service.

For example, the widow of a second lieutenant with over 14 years' service currently receives $157 per month in survivor benefit pay. Under the new law, she will receive no increase unless her husband had at least four years' active enlisted service, in which case the amount will go up to $160.

Widows of officers with at least four years' active enlisted service, widows of warrant officers and widows of enlisted men can determine the amount of their new survivor payment by taking 12 percent of the new basic pay of their husband's active duty rank and adding $112.

For widows of all other officers (those who had no active enlisted service or less than four years' active enlisted service) the following table shows both the old and new survivor benefit payments which go into effect on 1 June.

Cadet-Midshipman Cost At Three Academies Ranges From $7,500 To $26,600

CADETS at the U. S. Air Force Academy will cost the Government about $26,600 each during the coming fiscal year, compared with about $9,400 for each USMA Cadet and about $7,500 for each USNA Midshipman.

Annual budgets for the three schools are relatively close. For fiscal '59, Congress has been asked to appropriate $22.5 million for West Point, $25.5 million for Annapolis and $30 million for the Air Force Academy.

The breakdown of expenses indicates that the average yearly cost of educating an Air Force cadet will go down as the enrollment increases.

The Naval Academy has the largest number of students and the smallest per capita cost. The Air Force Academy has the smallest number of cadets and the largest per capita cost.

During the current fiscal year, the Air Force Academy had only 764 Cadets. Average cost per cadet was $31,166. Next year the number of Cadets will climb to 1,128 and the average cost for each Cadet will drop to $26,647.

The Naval Academy had 3,555 Midshipmen this year. The average cost was $7,076. Next year, with fewer Midshipmen (3,387), the average cost goes up to $7,551.

The number of Cadets at West Point was 2,400 last year and will remain at that level next year, although the average cost will go up from $9,199 to $9,404. Most of the increase is attributed to an increase in overhead pay and allowances of military personnel assigned to the Academy.

AIR SAFETY. Lt. Col. Stephen L. Bettinger, left, commander, 21st Fighter Day Sqdn., George AFB, Calif., accepts the congratulations of 831st Air Division commander, Col. George Laven, Jr., for his squadron winning the Air Force Flying Safety Plaque, as 413th Fighter Day Wing commander Col. Gordon F. Blood holds the award. The unit was without a flying accident for 18 months, covering more than 7,000 flying hours in North American F-100C and F-100D Supersabres.

Pay Raise

may go below that figure" as a result of the pay legislation.

Defense leaders were jubilant over the successful pay campaign on Capitol Hill. The Services recognize that the bill, as finally passed, provides substantially more incentive than were asked by the Administration—unprecedented in recent pay legislation history.

Speaking 15 May at Houston, Tex., General Nathan F. Twining, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said:

"All of us in the Armed Forces are most appreciative and optimistic about the prospects for increased pay. With enactment of a pay bill, it should go a long way toward attracting and retaining the highly skilled people we need so badly."

Similar views were expressed to THE JOURNAL by Lt. Gen. James F. Collins, Army Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel, and VADM. Harold P. Smith, Navy Chief of Personnel.

Air Force and Marine Corps statements were being held up—obviously awaiting the President's final signature on the legislation.

Speaking to THE JOURNAL, Assistant Secretary Francis conceded immediately that the measure has some shortcomings from the point of view of the Services. He mentioned particularly the fact that only a 6% increase is provided for most retired persons.

Mr. Francis stressed, however, that "this is a darn good bill, one that will enable us to achieve the results which were found essential by the Cordiner Committee and our other studies."

The Assistant Secretary made it a strong point to say that "money isn't the only thing involved in the action taken by Congress." He said that Service people will recognize the overwhelming support for the pay legislation as a "reflection of the mood of the people."

He explained that the Cordiner Committee had found that many career officers and enlisted men were discouraged by the lack of recognition for their contribution to the Nation. Assistant Secretary Francis observed that the pay legislation will give "increased recognition and new prestige to career military service."

He said that in addition to the "splendid non-partisan support" which the President's request for pay changes received on Capitol Hill, "the Nation owes a deep debt of gratitude to Mr. Cordiner" and his Committee.

As THE JOURNAL went to press, a date had not yet been set for the signing of the legislation, but there appeared no question that it would be in ample time for implementation 1 June.

Navy League Resists Reorganization Proposal On Missions; Urges Fight For Higher Retired Pay; Plans Expansion

(This is the third in a series of special JOURNAL reports on important Service associations. The issue of 3 May featured the Association of the U. S. Army; last week's issue told of the activities of the Air Force Association.)

THE Navy League, armed with a new magazine, has set sail on a concerted program to strengthen its ranks.

The League ended its recent convention in San Francisco with renewed opposition to President Eisenhower's Defense reorganization and with strong backing for increased retired pay for all Services.

A staunch foe of all efforts to change the assigned roles of the military Departments, the League stressed its desire "that the Military Departments be separately administered." It agreed with the President that the Secretary of Defense should be given some discretion in the allocation and expenditure of funds, but said he should not have control of more than five per cent of Defense appropriations.

The Convention reelected John J. Bergen as President. A Naval Reserve rear admiral, he is Chairman of the Board of the Graham-Paige Corporation, 40 Wall Street, New York City.

Citing Congressional pay action which limits pay increases for retired personnel to 6%, the Convention advocated pay increases "which would apply equally in the same percentage to both active and retired personnel."

The convention, biggest in the League's 56 year history, registered 900 delegates from the United States, Hawaii and Puerto Rico. Its 16,000 square feet of exhibits attracted huge throngs to San Francisco's new Masonic Memorial Temple.

National Headquarters for the Navy League is located in the Mills Building, Washington, D. C., within sight of the White House. Its six-man staff, headed by W. Royce Powell, Executive Assistant to the League President and Executive Committee, carries out the organization's day-to-day function of emphasizing the unity of the Navy "with every interest and activity of our national life."

Founded in 1902 with the direct financial and personal support of President Theodore Roosevelt, the Navy League is an exclusively civilian group. Unlike the Army and Air Force Associations, its regulations forbid persons on active duty from joining.

At the present time, membership is 22,000. League officials hope to boost this to 30,000 before the end of the year.

Also unlike the Association of the U. S. Army and the Air Force Association, the Navy League does not have a strong industry program. It has only five corporate memberships, compared with the hundreds of corporate memberships in the other associations. League officials say that even though they have no plans to enlarge their industry affiliations, they would like to have some sort of expanded program to provide industrial leaders with more comprehensive information about Navy activities.

To bring the Navy's story home to the American people the League sponsors two main programs, the Navy Day Observance, and the Navy Buddy Program for boys of high school age. The Annual Navy Day observance 27 October is financed entirely by the League in cooperation with other interested organizations.

Purpose of the Buddy Program is to "acquaint the youth of the country with the Navy, its traditions, purposes, and role as part of a strong defense team." Under the program, boys from all over the country are taken on tours of Navy installations

SMALLEST OF THREE

The Navy League wants to increase its strength from the present 22,000 to 30,000 by the end of the year.

It must more than double its present membership to catch up to its counterparts in the Army and Air Force Associations, with memberships of 60,000 and 58,000 respectively.

and cruises aboard operational Navy ships. First Chairman of the program, which League officials describe as a big impetus to Navy recruiting, was former Secretary of the Navy Dan Kimball, President of Aerojet-General Corporation. It is now headed by George Halas, owner of the Chicago Bears football team.

Latest change in the operation of the League has seen its magazine "Now Hear This" supplanted by the bigger, slicker "Navy, The Magazine of Seapower." Editorial Director J. Royce Powell said the League is attempting to broaden the coverage of the magazine to bring it down to the general readership level.

The League's 22,000 members are divided into 12 regions, with approximately 187 councils in the United States, Hawaii and Puerto Rico.

Besides President Bergen, national 1958-1959 officers include:

U. S. COAST GUARD

Secretary of the Treasury—Robert B. Anderson
Commandant—Vice Adm. Alfred C. Richmond

MORE THAN $30,000 due to Coast Guard officers, former officers, and widows of deceased officers may be delayed because of a lack of appropriations.

The money became due as a result of applications made by officers and legal representatives of widows following passage of Public Law 85-255, approved by Congress 2 Sept. 1957.

The law provides:

"That upon application of any officer or former officer (including the widows and legal representatives of such officers who are deceased) of the services mentioned in the Joint Pay Act of June 10, 1922, who, upon advancement in rank, did not receive an increase in the rates of pay or allowances for any part of the period beginning July 1, 1932, and ending June 30, 1934, by reason of the application in the case of such officer of Section 201 . . . of the Legislative Appropriation Act for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1933, the Comptroller General shall determine the aggregate amount of pay and allowances, in addition to that otherwise accruing, which would have accrued to such officer if such section had not been applied in his case (except as to longevity) and pay to such officer the amount so determined."

In a letter to the Treasury Secretary, the Comptroller General states that his Claims Division has determined amounts in excess of $30,000 to be allowable.

"However," he continues, "no amounts have been certified for payment for the reason that there appears to be no available appropriation from which such claims may be paid."

The Comptroller notes that in testimony before the Appropriations Committee, VAdm. Alfred C. Richmond, testified that the Coast Guard planned to make the payments out of this Fiscal Year's "Operating Expenses" portion of its appropriation.

The Comptroller states that an examination of law leads to the conclusion that the statements of the Commandant did not have the effect of making available for payment of claims arising under PL 85-255 funds thereafter appropriated for "Operating Expenses."

The Comptroller states that "it is a well established rule that appropriations provided by Congress to the Federal agencies may only be used for the objects for which they are made and no others."

"This matter," the Comptroller told the Secretary, "is brought to your attention at this time in order that an appropriate request for an appropriation may be submitted to Congress during the present session."

Caterpillar Gets Army Tractor Contract; Lockheed Moves Ahead On ASW Turbo-Prop

Caterpillar Tractor Co. of Peoria, Ill., has been awarded an $11,722,980 contract, to furnish D8 Tractors to the Army Corps of Engineers for units around the world.

Governmental Sales Manager E. B. English said the contract represents the company's largest single peacetime military order. A substantial quantity of parts will be purchased later.

Caterpillar was awarded the initial contract 13 March on a competitive low bid. The Army later exercised its right under an option clause to increase the order by 50%.

The D8 is the second largest model of crawler tractor built by Caterpillar.

LOCKHEED'S CALIFORNIA DIVISION has received a $2,000,000 R&D Navy contract "as a first step" toward production of a faster, more protective, land-based antisubmarine bomber.

Lockheed Vice President and California Division General Manager Burt C. Mone-smith reported the new sub-hunter—a military version of Lockheed's prop-jet Electra—will be the nation's first turbine-powered ASW plane.

An aerodynamic prototype will be flying in August, he added.

"With prop-jet power and modern electronics, it is designed to fly faster, locate targets better and fight harder than any other airplane ever proposed for anti-submarine duty," Mone-smith said. "This design shows strong promise of leading to a new family of ASW planes."

The new patrol plane model—modified to fit the special military assignment—basically will be the same as commercial prop-jet Electra transports now on the Lockheed production line.

The fuselage will include a plastic tail "stinger" housing a "MAD" unit—which seeks out submerged metallic objects by noting any deviation in the normal magnetic fields. A similar elongation is on Lockheed's P2V-7 Neptune, today's "standard" ASW airplane. Lockheed has produced nearly 1,000 Neptunes since 1944.

Fitted with four Allison T56A engines developing a total of 16,200 h.p. at take-off, the new prop-jet will cruise nearly 100 per cent faster than the jet-plus-piston-engine Neptune.

Because the T56A-7 engines are specified for Air Force C-130B Hercules transports built by the company's Georgia Division, they will enter Navy service pre-tested and proven.

Battery Vest Will Heat Combat Men

The Army has developed a battery vest, utilizing human body heat to keep dry cells warm and active for radio operators in extremely cold weather.

The idea, developed by the Signal Research and Development Laboratory, Ft. Monmouth, N. J., is to place dry cell batteries in a vestlike garment worn beneath parkas to capture body heat. A cord is used to plug in standard Army radios.

Because batteries go dead rapidly when extreme cold slows down their electrochemical action, keeping them warm is especially difficult when troops are on the move. However, with the vest, batteries developed for low-temperature use are expected to stay in service ten times longer in 40-degree-below-zero weather.

The battery vest has been undergoing rigorous field tests in Alaska where Signal Corps communications engineers found the technique extremely valuable. Special pouches in the vest also could keep chemicals and drugs warm when explorers are on the trail, they reported.

Test models were built by Burgess Battery Co., Freeport, Long Island, N. Y.

Free World's First High-Energy Plant

Secretary of the Navy Thomas S. Gates, Jr., has activated the free world's first full-scale production plant for high-energy boron fuels.

The Secretary pressed a button in his Pentagon office at noon 14 May which signalled the start of operations of the Navy's plant, Model City, N. Y., near Niagara Falls, operated by the Olin-Mathieson Chemical Corporation.

The $4.5 million plant will produce fuels that will add range and greater speeds to aircraft and missiles.

The Navy plant adjoins a larger Air Force high-energy fuel plant scheduled for completion next year.

Honeywell Reports New Nuclear Warhead Package

The Army's Honest John tactical support missile will be able to deliver a "massive battlefield punch" with a new nuclear warhead "package" now under development by Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator Company.

Troops, will be able to use either the nuclear warhead or a conventional explosive, as the tactical situation demands, according to Mr. Clyde A. Parton, General Manager of Honeywell's Ordnance Division.

Technical supervision of the project is under direction of the Army's Picatinny Arsenal, Dover, N. J.

Navy Cites Researchers For "Polaris" Work

The Navy has honored three men whose research work was instrumental in pushing the solid propellant used in the Polaris missile to a "breakthrough."

Cdr. William J. Corcoran, Special Projects Office, Bureau of Ordnance, received the Commendation Ribbon for contributions to the planning and guidance of research for propellant applications to the Fleet Ballistic Missile.

Dr. Karl Klager, Manager, Aerojet-General Corporation's Solid Propellant Development Division, Sacramento, was awarded the Distinguished Public Service Award for leadership in the selection of successful propellant formulations which led to a desired balance of burning rate, physical properties and specific impulse.

Mr. Elliott Mitchell, Chief Propulsion Scientist, Office of the Assistant Chief of Research, BuOrd, received the Distinguished Civilian Service Award for his contribution to the search for additives resulting in increased propellant energy.

The awards were conferred by Under Secretary William B. Franke at a ceremony held at the Pentagon 8 May.

CITED FOR HIS ROLE in the development of new solid propellants, such as used in the Polaris missile, is Cdr. William J. Corcoran, USN, left, who has been presented with a Letter of Commendation by Under Secretary of the Navy William B. Franke.

COMBINATION PERSONNEL AND CARGO carrier developed by Westinghouse, Inc., is shown through its paces by test drivers in Toledo. The new 1/4 ton vehicle carries six men and can be converted quickly to a personnel carrier into a 1/4-ton truck by folding seats flush into the platform bed. It is the growth of the 1/4-ton mechanical Mule weapon carrier. The vehicle features individual wheel suspension, adjustable height platform, 4-wheel selective 2 or 4-wheel steering and removable shield and cab enclosure. The Army Ordnance Center has ordered one for test purposes.

NEW SAC "HARDWARE"

The Strategic Air Command will add to its "arsenal" with the purchase of more than 1,500,000 pieces of decorated Pyrex dinnerware from the Corning Glass Works.

Vice President R. Lee Waterman of the Consumer Products Division said the order represents almost 300,000 six-piece place settings.

The dinner plates will be decorated with a white star motif against a blue border and crested with SAC's insignia.

Martin Orlando Gets New Contract

The Army has awarded a $5.9 million contract to the Martin Company, Orlando, Fla., for the Lacrosse missile program.

Also announced was an $8.5 million award to the Blount Brothers Construction Company, Montgomery, Ala., work on a missile facility at Otis Air Mass.

The Army gave a $1.2 million contract to Lawless and Alfred, Inc. for construction of an altitude lab building at Brooks AFB, Tex.

The Martin plant at Orlando, in addition to the Lacrosse, builds the Minuteman Master for the Army, and has been given an Army contract for development of Pershing solid-propellant missile.

Also under production at Orlando the Bullpup air-to-surface missile—able of firing an atomic warhead—which has been produced for the Navy, which the Air Force also intends to use.

Appointments

KENNETH M. LORD Director of Engineering in the Electronics Division of Stromberg-Carlson, Rochester, N. Y., a division of General Dynamics Corporation. He will have charge of all engineering activities in the company's Electronics Division which manufactures a variety of equipment for civilian and military use. During WW II, he entered the Navy as an ensign and served for a year on a destroyer in the South Pacific. He was discharged in 1945 as a Lieutenant Commander.

E. F. COY, former Director of Sales of the Mechanical Division of General Mills, Minneapolis, Vice-President—Marketing of Electronic Communications, Inc., St. Petersburg, Fla. A Lieutenant Commander in the Navy, Mr. Coy was in the Bureau of Ordnance with responsibility for the Naval Ordnance Plant in Indianapolis much of the time from November 1942 to August 1946.

A. L. CLARK Manager of Engineering and Sales of Beech Aircraft Corporation's Boulder Division, Colorado. He will assist Mr. George W. Hostettler, newly appointed Manager of the Boulder Division.

CAPT. PIERRE BOUCHERON, USNR, radio pioneer and original advertising-public relations manager for R.C.A., has been appointed Sales Manager for Grinnell Color, Inc., television engineers and researchers of New York City.

Army Research Chief Visits Hiller 'Copter Facility

Lt. Gen. Arthur G. Trudeau, Army Research Chief, last week visited Hiller Helicopters at Palo Alto, Calif., to familiarize himself with the company's operations. He was accompanied by Col. W. M. Harlingen, Office of the Chief of Research. This was General Trudeau's first visit to Hiller since he took over the post vacated by Lt. Gen. James M. G. USA-Ret.

Included in the familiarization were flight demonstrations of the AH-1ZD "Raven" helicopter, and the newest 12-E, a high performing helicopter powered by the Lycoming 305 horsepower engine.

General Trudeau and Colonel Harlingen also viewed Hiller's tilt-wing project, the 33,000 pound VTOL research transport, which is in the final stages of construction.

"PEACE OR PIECEMEAL," a new Army study—controversial in some parts on the problems of limited war will be the subject of a special article of analysis in next week's issue of THE JOURNAL. The Army pamphlet begins with the assertion by General Maxwell D. Taylor, Chief of Staff, that "the clear readiness of our deterrent forces, and our evident determination to employ them if necessary, may enable us to avoid the use of force in either general or limited war."

ANOTHER HIGHLIGHT of the 24 May issue will be the fourth in a series of reports on current activities of major military associations, in this case the National Guard Association, an organization that strongly opposes a Pentagon plan to reduce the Guard by six infantry divisions.

19th Air Force, With Only 26 Officers And 31 Airmen, Is Ready To Deploy TAC Units World-Wide To Cope With Local Wars

By
MAJ. GEN. HENRY VICCELLIO, USAF
Commander, 19th Air Force

WITHIN the past one and one-half years a considerable amount of publicity has been accorded the Tactical Air Command Composite Air Strike Force. Statements by General O. P. Weyland, the Commander of Tactical Air Command, have emphasized the global character of the CASF. Articles in various publications have explained that the CASF is a precisely configured force capable of rapid deployment to any area in the world to be used either as a deterrent to, or a participant in, local wars. The CASF accomplishments during various state-side, trans-ocean and overseas operations have been reported.

Maj. Gen. Viccellio

Throughout these statements and articles the name of a relatively new organization has frequently appeared. To the people within TAC this organization, the Nineteenth Air Force, located at Foster AFB, Tex., has become synonymous with global mobility and local war. What Nineteenth Air Force is, however, its mission and functions, and how it operates, is still relatively unknown outside of TAC. I would like to describe our organization and how it fulfills its local war mission.

Three Years Old

The Nineteenth Air Force, which will celebrate its third birthday in July, is one of three TAC air forces directly responsible to General Weyland. It was conceived by General Weyland and approved during an exchange of correspondence between General Weyland and General White, then Vice Chief of Staff, USAF, in March 1955.

The other two air forces, the Ninth at Shaw AFB, S. C., and the Twelfth at Waco, Tex., are traditional in every sense of the word. They command, equip, administer and train all the various TAC forces, both tactical and support. Their internal and command organizations follow conventional lines.

Nineteenth, on the other hand, commands nothing. It was organized solely to plan for, deploy with, and exercise operational control of composite air strike forces in any area of the world where local war might occur.

This Is The Mission

The mission of Nineteenth Air Force as contained in TAC Regulation 20-11 is:

"The Nineteenth Air Force provides Tactical Air Command with a specialized and highly versatile command element capable of: Deploying with appropriate tactical forces for combat action to any area of the world, assuming operational control of units attached by Commander, Tactical Air Command, for participation in exercises, maneuvers, and other operations as required. The attached units may include tactical bombardment, fighter-bomber, fighter-day, air refueling, tactical missile, combat airlift, reconnaissance, and associated control and communications and support units."

This is our mission—the capability for which we have prepared ourselves. In arriving at this capability it has been necessary to concentrate on two primary tasks: planning and exercising.

First, planning for the deployment and employment of "appropriate tactical forces." The movement of a miniature tactical air force around the world in a matter of hours with the capability to conduct sustained operations is not a simple operation. It involves complex large-scale hookups between tactical aircraft and KB-50 tankers, some requiring rendezvous hundreds of miles from land. Each rendezvous must be computed to the minute, each fuel transfer to the pound of fuel. Supplies and equipment to be airlifted by MATS and TAC cargo aircraft must be computed to the last nut and bolt. All of these and a myriad of other details must be planned in infinite detail. Additionally, the plan must be coordinated with many agencies who contribute directly or indirectly to the operation.

Planning And Exercises

The second task, exercising the CASF, trains and tests all elements involved in movement, control and support of the force. In addition it affords practice to crews of tactical aircraft and tankers; to the control and liaison apparatus which controls the movement of the force; and experience to all, including my headquarters, in operating together in the various overseas areas.

Exercises are the only means whereby combat ready squadrons can be welded into an effective force capable of instant reaction and a smooth transition from peacetime CONUS status to a local war thousands of miles away.

The tasks of planning and exercising are continuous. In our planning we are constantly seeking new concepts, methods or techniques which will improve our capability to react, to move or to operate when in place. In our exercises we test and evaluate these new ideas and either discard them or include them in our plan.

It is not possible here for me to give the results of all this. I can say, however, that by trial and error and the application of new techniques we have decreased the time required to deploy to a local war area by more than one half within the past one and one-half years.

Nineteenth Air Force not only has an unusual mission; because of the mission it is a rather unusual air force headquarters in its internal organization. With no units assigned on a permanent basis, many staff functions generally associated with an air force headquarters are not present here. When I require advice in technical fields, such as medical, budget and fiscal, or security, officers of the 450th Fighter-Day Wing at Foster Air Force Base, provide such advice. No Installations, Chaplain, Flying Safety, Ground Safety, Manpower and Organization, Inspector, Judge Advocate, or Information Services personnel are assigned. Advice and assistance is sought elsewhere if required.

Small Headquarters

Anyone who has been associated with a normal Numbered Air Force or comparable headquarters will be impressed by the size of Nineteenth Headquarters. To carry out our mission we are authorized 26 officers and 31 airmen. With this relatively small group of people it has been possible to simplify our organization and intra-headquarters procedures to the extent that the work we generate is directed to our primary mission.

Another advantage inherent in our size is the degree of mobility and quick reaction we are able to attain. Briefly, we are organized with the majority of our officer strength in the plans and operations functions. Fifteen out of our authorized officers are concentrated here. The remainder of the staff, with the exception of my deputy commander, are spread through the logistics, intelligence, communications and administrative fields. Their primary duties now consist of supporting the planning activities of the headquarters, and in administering the fifty-odd people assigned. Some of these functions, particularly Intelligence, would require augmentation in an actual local war situation.

With this background let me take a hypothetical situation and carry it through from initiation of an alert to actual hostilities. The signal to go is flashed from Tactical Air Command Headquarters to its three Air Forces and all CASF units simultaneously. At the same time SAC, MATS, AMC and other commands, whose support or coordination is required, are notified. Immediately things begin to happen.

Planning Gives Speed

The Nineteenth Air Force Headquarters Staff is assembled, prepared to board C-54 or C-130 aircraft. Pre-packaged supplies and equipment for our Air Operations Center are inspected, buttoned up and moved to a loading area. At the same time other portions of the CASF are taking action to implement the appropriate plan. Cargo is loaded for loading aboard C-130 and C-124 aircraft; crews are assembled, equipment checked, personnel briefed.

At the designated time aircraft begin to move — tankers, bombers, fighters, reconnaissance, and transport. During the movement phase, control is exercised by a control center at either Ninth or Twelfth Air Force, depending on the direction of the move. It is exercised through teams which are already in place at key locations. Nineteenth Air Force moves concurrently with the CASF; however, throughout the move I am able to keep informed of the progress of the movement and the situation at the destination via radio in my aircraft.

At the destination we lose no time in going into full-scale operation. We already are familiar with the base, which has previously been thoroughly surveyed. We have brought the people, equipment and supplies to establish and operate an Air Operations Center which can, if required, be expanded into a Joint Operations Center. More than likely a building has been set aside for our use and we move right in. Where no building is available for our use, we take our own. In either event there is no indecision on our part; we know beforehand what to do.

Ready To Operate

Using existing communications equipment or gear brought with us we establish contact with our higher headquarters and subordinate units and are ready to operate. I might add that this higher headquarters might be the Air Component Commander of a Joint Task Force or the Theater Air Commander.

This doesn't tell the whole story. People require food and a place to sleep. Aircraft must be maintained and turned around. Personnel to augment Nineteenth Air Force in the Air Operations Center must be available. These things have all been planned and exercised, however, and a liberal coating of grease applied to those areas which, during exercises, seemed to move sluggishly.

In a final analysis there are two things which, when put together, will make this operation move like a well-oiled machine. First, a plan which has been tested, exercised, changed and tested and practiced again. Second, a group of professional airmen who know their individual jobs and are devoted to making the operation work. We have the plan and we have the people.

CONGRATULATIONS. Mayor H. Roe Bartle of Kansas City, Mo., congratulates Maj. Gen. Jarrod V. Crabb, USAF, Commander of the Central Air Defense Force, after presenting him with a resolution passed by the City Council of Kansas City lauding him for civic leadership. The unusual resolution was read at a luncheon attended by business leaders and newspaper editors from Greater Kansas City. General Crabb will shortly leave CADEF at Richards-Gebaur AFB to become Chief of Staff of the Air Defense Command at Colorado Springs. He will be succeeded by Maj. Gen. John D. Stevenson, director of Plans for Tactical Air Command, Langley AFB, Va.

Longevity Inequity

From first page—

Armed Services can count the Academy time for longevity. But he can't count the Academy service if he graduates.

The Academy time is creditable for civilian retirement from the Government; it also counts for Congressional retirement.

Interesting fact is that thousands of young men who enlist for only six months active duty under the Reserve Forces Act and who then attend college receive longevity credit during their educational careers, since they are members of the Reserve.

Had the new pay legislation eliminated longevity entirely, the inequity would have been resolved. But longevity was not eliminated.

Though modified, it remains a major factor in determining a military man's pay.

Thus, it would seem likely that the Defense Department, having asked in 1956 for remedial action on the Academy-ROTC issue, would now be moved, with the passage of the pay bill, to reexamine existing discriminatory laws.

The original Pentagon proposal would have restricted longevity credit for Academy and ROTC time to officers with at least four years active service, thereby assuring rewards exclusively for career people.

No military officer would object to such a restriction. Unless the Pentagon takes the initiative anew to eliminate inequities in officer pay, it is certain there will be cause for dissatisfaction and the feeling that Academy and ROTC graduates still are receiving "second class" consideration when it comes to pay.

Comptroller Credits Reserve Service

The Comptroller General has ruled that Service in the Auxiliary Reserve may be counted in computing longevity for retired pay purposes.

Basing his decision (B-135426) on section 202 of the Career Compensation Act of 1949, the Comptroller awarded Col. Bert B. Kuss, USAF-Ret., the difference between retired pay based on 26 and 30 years' service.

14,500 Army Master Sergeants Will Win Promotion To New Pay Grades E-8, E-9

The Army will promote 14,500 master sergeants in "key leadership positions" to E-8 and E-9 through fiscal year 1962.

In the year beginning 1 July, plans call for promotion of 880 master sergeants to E-9 and 2,500 to E-8.

Fiscal '60 will see 1,600 promoted to E-9 and 5,000 to E-8. In fiscal '61, 2,500 will be promoted to E-9 and 8,000 to E-8, in fiscal '62, 3,500 to E-9 and 11,000 to E-8.

The Army says approximately one-half of the positions will be ultimately filled by first sergeants and sergeant majors. The remaining half will be filled by "technically qualified Non Commissioned Officers in other critical areas."

Men appointed to pay grade E-9 will have to serve first for 16 months in pay grade E-8, except that commanders will be authorized to cut the time-in-grade down as much as eight months to permit more rapid advancement for outstanding men. The Army expects this control to provide incentive for individuals in the soft skills to transfer to the critical leadership skills.

Men appointed to E-8 will have to serve for 14 months in pay grade E-7, except that commanders will be authorized to cut the time-in-grade down as much as seven months.

The Army estimates that Non Commissioned Officers will have a minimum of 15 years' service when promoted to E-8 and a minimum of 18 years' service when promoted to E-9. The new military pay bill provides that men must have completed at least eight years of cumulative service to be advanced to E-8 and 10 years to be advanced to E-9.

By advancing personnel to fill the new pay grades over a four-year period, the Army said it will be able to prevent stagnation, provide an even flow and progression to the highest grade, provide more competition, make sure individuals are qualified in MOS prior to promotion, and prevent "grade jumps."

The cost, spread over your lifetime, is less than any other permanent insurance.

5 YEAR TERM PLAN

Five Year Term Insurance meets the need of one who wants the greatest amount of protection for a limited time at the lowest possible cost. It's an ideal plan while your income is relatively low but your insurance needs are great. Now everyone had this plan during World War II but many converted it to Ordinary Life, explained above.

Once your original application is approved, your policy may be renewed for additional five year periods, or converted to another type of insurance, regardless of your health at that time. (Physician examination not even required.) Both term and ordinary life insurance are issued in minimum amounts of $5,000. You may pay for as much as you want but amounts over $15,000, a copy of your current physical is required. If you enter or leave service, there is NO CHANGE in cost.
